A BYLAW OF THE CITY OF LETHBRIDGE TO REPEAL BORROWING BYLAWS
5712, 5847 and 6078

WHEREAS the Council of the City of Lethbridge approved Borrowing Bylaw 5712 at a meeting of Council on the 11th day of July, 2011;

AND WHEREAS the project covered by Bylaw 5712 was replaced by a new borrowing bylaw, Water Treatment Plant Process Redundancy Project. The scope of the project covered by Bylaw 5712 did not match the project requirements. The project is still being ongoing and a new bylaw has been passed, being Bylaw 6081.

WHEREAS the Council of the City of Lethbridge approved Borrowing Bylaw 5847 at a meeting of Council on the 3rd day of September, 2013;

AND WHEREAS the project covered by Bylaw 5847 was redefined and the term in the bylaw no longer fit the term required; and, the scope of the project covered by Bylaw 5847 did not match the project, the project is still being pursued and a new Bylaw will be submitted;

WHEREAS the Council of the City of Lethbridge approved Borrowing Bylaw 6078 at a meeting of Council on the 22nd day of January, 2018;

AND WHEREAS the scope of the project covered by Bylaw 6078 did not match the project, the project is still ongoing with a new Bylaw to be submitted;

NOW THEREFORE, THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF LETHBRIDGE, DULY ASSEMBLED, HEREBY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS:

1. Bylaws, 5712, 5847 and 6078 are hereby repealed.

2. This Bylaw shall come into effect on the date of final passing thereof.

Facebook renames itself in the middle of crisis

Barbara Ortutay
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS - OAKLAND, CA

Like many companies in trouble before it, Facebook is changing its name and logo. Facebook Inc. is now Meta Platforms Inc., or Meta for short, to reflect what CEO Mark Zuckerberg said is its commitment to developing the new surround-yourself technology known as the "metaverse." But the social network itself will still be called Facebook.

Also unchanged, at least for now, are its chief executive and senior leadership, its corporate structure and the crisis that has enveloped the company.

Skeptics immediately accused the company of trying to change the subject from the Facebook Papers, the trove of leaked documents that have plunged it into the biggest crisis since it was founded in Zuckerberg's Harvard dorm room 17 years ago. The documents portray Facebook as putting profits ahead of ridding its platform of hate, political strife and misinformation around the world.

The move reminded marketing consultant Laura Lites of when energy company BP rebranded itself to "Beyond Petroleum" to escape criticism that the oil giant harmed the environment.

"Facebook is the world's social media platform, and they are being accused of creating something that is harmful to people and society," she said. "They can't walk away from the social network with a new corporate name and talk of a future metaverse."

Facebook the app is not changing its name. Nor are Instagram, WhatsApp and Messenger. The company's corporate structure also won't change. But on Dec. 1, its stock will start trading under a new ticker symbol, META.

The metaverse is sort of the internet brought to life, or at least rendered in 3D. Zuckerberg has described it as a "virtual environment" you can go inside of, instead of just looking at on a screen. People can meet, work and play, using virtual reality headsets, augmented reality glasses, smartphone apps or other devices.

It also will incorporate other aspects of online life such as shopping and social media, according to Victoria Petrock, an analyst who follows emerging technologies.

Zuckerberg's foray into virtual reality has drawn some comparisons to fellow tech-billionaire's outer space adventures and jokes that perhaps it's understandable he would want to escape his current reality amid calls

Facebook unveiled their new Meta sign at the company headquarters in Menlo Park, Calif. Facebook Inc. announced Thursday that it is changing its name to Meta Platforms Inc., joining a long list of companies that have tried to rebrand themselves over the years. ASSOCIATED PRESS PHOTO for his resignation and increasing scrutiny of the company.

On Monday, Zuckerberg announced a new segment for Facebook that will begin reporting its financial results separately from the company's Family of Apps segment starting in the final quarter of this year. The entity, Reality Labs, will reduce Facebook's overall operating profit by about $10 billion this year, the company said.

Zuckerberg said that he expects the metaverse to reach a billion people within the next decade and that he hopes the new technology will create millions of jobs for creators.

The announcement comes amid heightened legislative and regulatory scrutiny of Facebook in many parts of the world because of the Facebook Papers. A corporate rebranding isn't likely to solve the myriad problems revealed by the internal documents or quiet the alarms that critics have been raising for years about the harm the company's products are causing to society.

Zuckerberg, for his part, has largely dismissed the furor triggered by the Facebook Papers as unfair.

In an interesting twist, the Chan Zuckerberg Initiative, the philanthropic organization run by Zuckerberg and his wife, Priscilla Chan, bought a Canadian scientific literature analysis company called Meta in 2017.

By Thursday afternoon, though, its website meta.org announced that it will "sunset" at the end of March. The meta.com domain, meanwhile, redirected to the former Facebook's rebranded corporate site.

At headquarters in Menlo Park, California, the iconic thumbs up sign that has long been outside was repainted to a blue, pretzel-shape logo resembling an infinity symbol.

Some of Facebook's biggest critics seemed unimpressed by the name change. The Real Facebook Oversight Board, a watchdog group founded on the company's announcement that it will keep its name.

"Changing their name doesn't change reality. Facebook is destroying our democracy and is the world's leading peddler of disinformation and hate," the group said in a statement. "Their meaningless name change should not distract from the investigation, regulation and real, independent oversight needed to hold Facebook accountable."

In explaining the rebrand, Zuckerberg said the name Facebook no longer encompasses everything the company does. In addition to the social network, that now includes Instagram, Messenger, its Quest VR headset, its Horizon VR platform and more.

"Today we are seen as a social media company," Zuckerberg said. "But our DNA is a company that builds technology to connect people."

UK pledges retaliation to French fishing threats

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS - LONDON

Britain's environment minister pledged Friday to retaliate, if France carries through on threats to block U.K. fishing ships from French ports, warning that "two can play at that game" in the worsening dispute rooted in Britain's departure from the European Union.

Britain summoned the French ambassador for a dressing-down after French authorities fined two British fishing vessels and kept one in port overnight Thursday.

"Since the U.K. left the economic orbit of the EU in January, relations between London and Paris have become increasingly frayed as the nations on either side of the English Channel sort out a post-Brexit path.

France has threatened to block British boats and tighten checks on U.K. vessels, unless French vessels get more permits to fish in U.K. waters. France also suggested it might restrict energy supplies to the Channel Islands, British Crown dependencies that lie off the coast of France and are heavily dependent on French electricity.

"We will see what they do," British Environment Secretary George Eustice told Sky News. "But if they do bring these into place, well, two can play at that game and we reserve the ability to respond in a proportionate way."

The U.K. government said France's ambassador, Catherine Colonna, would be summoned to the Foreign Office on Friday, in an official sign of displeasure.

"We regret the confrontational language that has been consistently used by the French government on this issue, which makes this situation no easier to resolve," the British government said.

France vehemently protests the decision last month by the U.K. and the Channel Island of Jersey to refuse dozens of French fishing boats licenses to operate in their territorial waters. Dozens of other licenses were granted. France says the restrictions are contrary to the post-Brexit agreement that Britain signed when it left the EU.

Meanwhile, the European Union's executive said U.K. authorities withdrew the impounded vessels' license to fish off France on March 1. But Macdonald Shefflin, who operates the impounded scallop vessel Cornelia Gert Jan, hit back, saying the vessels were issued there was an issue with the license and have sought clarification from U.K. authorities. They insist they were acting in good faith.

"Under normal circumstances, if there was an error in administration, it would have been dealt with via a phone call," said Andrew Brown, the head of sustainability and public affairs for the company.

Instead, the ship and its crew have found themselves at the center of post-Brexit spat on the implementation of the Brexit Fishing Agreement. "We are looking to the U.K. government to defend the rights of the U.K. fishing fleet and ensure that the fishing rights provided under the Brexit Fishing agreement are fully respected by the EU," the company said.

Cannabis company Hexo reports $67.9M loss

THE CANADIAN PRESS - OTTAWA

Hexo Corp. reported a $67.9 million net loss in its latest quarter as the company closed its acquisition of Zenabis Global Inc.

The Ottawa-based cannabis firm's fourth-quarter loss compared with $10.5 million in the same quarter last year.

Hexo says its net loss amounted to 19 cents per share for the period ended July 31, down from a loss of $7.08 per share in the fourth quarter of 2020.

The company's net revenue from sale of goods totalled $38.6 million, up from $2.7 million at the same time last year.

Hexo says its recent, $235-million purchase of Zenabis contributed $6.8 million in net revenue to the quarter.

Hexo's quarter was presided by chief executive Scott Cooper, who took over leadership of the company last week after co-founder Sebastian St-Louis departed amid a strategic reorganization.

Shaw CEO Brad Shaw reiterates commitment to Rogers deal as Shaw reports Q4 profit up

THE CANADIAN PRESS - CALGARY

Shaw Communications Inc. says it remains committed to its deal to be bought by Rogers Communications Inc. as it reported its fourth-quarter profit rose more than 30 per cent compared with a year ago.

"Shaw CEO Brad Shaw reiterated his commitment to work to close the transaction, adding that it was not appropriate to comment on a boardroom fight between members of the Rogers family over control of the company.

Edward Rogers, the son of late Rogers founder Ted Rogers, is fighting with his sisters and mother for control of the board of directors at Rogers.

He has asked a B.C. court to declare legitimate the newly constituted board he formed after being ousted as board chair earlier this month after media reports made public a failed plan to replace CEO Joe Natale with the company's chief financial officer.

Meanwhile, Shaw reported a profit of $252 million or 50 cents per diluted share for the quarter ended Aug. 31, up from a profit of $175 million or 34 cents per diluted share in the same quarter last year. Revenue totalled $1.38 billion, up from $1.35 billion.

Coaldale councillor Chapman recipient of AUMA service award

Erika Mathieu
SOUTHERN ALBERTA NEWSPAPERS

The winners of the 2021 Alberta Urban Municipalities Association (AUMA) awards were recently announced, and Coaldale Councillor Bill Chapman has been named a recipient of the Distinguished Service Award. The award is presented to elected officials of urban municipalities who have served 20 or more years on municipal council. "I've been on council now for this would be my fifth term here. I served up in Three Hills before that."

The award is a great honour for those serving the public in municipal governance. Councillor Chapman recalled, "I remember I used to go to AUMA all the time and these long-time service people with 20- and 30-year service awards from AUMA - I just looked up to them."

With respect to voter turnout, particularly in civic elections among younger people, active engagement among this demographic is significantly lower than their more age-advanced counterparts.

Elections Canada reports, "there is a significant turnout gap between younger and older demographics."

Whether this wanting engagement in municipal politics among younger people stems from apathy or a perception of insignificance, Councillor Chapman rejects the notion of inactivity.

"It does matter. Absolutely - that's where we all start. That's where I started. My very first board that I ever sat on was FCSS, and just being able to learn and be mentored in sort of that level of governance model from there, it led to other opportunities." Chapman spoke about how his extensive experiences in the public sector has allowed him to mentor younger people as an act of reciprocity.

Coaldale town councillor Bill Chapman, centre, votes on a motion at a past council meeting.

"Now that I'm much more advanced and in terms of my experiences that I can turn around and mentor and coach (younger people)."

In response to a question posed about his passion for impactful governance, Chapman said, "The boardroom is kind of where things really matter, or things happen. Where decisions are made. And all you have to do is understand how governance works and be able to present and deliver your ideas in your, your thoughts in, you know, very concise manner." Councillor Chapman pulls from his years of experience in diverse positions concerning decision making and governance and keenly notes when other municipalities are progressively tackling issues of design, infrastructure, and aspects of urban planning. He spoke about Coaldale's more distant future, too. Building a town that is accessible, inviting, and encourages engagement informs a lot of Chapman's passions for some of the completed and ongoing downtown revitalization initiatives.

"Main Street was something that I saw was really critical to moving Coaldale into the next hundred years and that was something that we worked hard on for all these

Chapman said this sense of forward-thinking governance has informed his own style of municipal governance and leadership.

"It's all about service at the end of the day, it's not about (getting) an extra thing on your resume, you know, it's not that it's about service. My style of service has always been to start at the bottom and work in the trenches, along with everyone else."

Chapman said one of his main goals over the years has been working towards goals that facilitate a spatial sense of community providing space for businesses and residents to thrive and exist in public spaces in a "festive, embracing, (and) inviting downtown."

"This last term council saw the vision for that revitalization to really rebuild downtown."

"The streets and sidewalks project that was sort of a part of a vision that we tried, in 2013, we talked about new street and sidewalks (to help revitalize Main Street."

Chapman says he envisions a robust and walkable main street, and infrastructure which supports community engagement, and features which encourage a communal use of space.

"I'm grateful for the past councils that we've had and I'm looking forward to the next council, and working with our new mayor. I think four years later, we might see some different things, but I think the spirit of Coaldale and the values that Coaldale was built on will live. I'm just hopeful."

The annual AUMA awards convention is scheduled for Nov. 17-19 and will take place at the Edmonton Convention Centre.

Taber area seeing lower than average vaccination rates

Kenyon Stronski

The Municipal District of Taber is one of the lowest vaccinated places in Alberta by percentage.

Alberta Health data as of Friday showed only 58.1 per cent of individuals aged 12 and up have one dose of vaccine and 52.7 per cent of individuals 12 and up have both doses. This makes the municipality the second-lowest vaccinated area in the South Zone, with the County of 48-Mile being the lowest. Taber Mayor Andrew Prokop explained it is a difficult situation, as many people have made the decision not to be vaccinated, which he says is their choice.

Prokop noted the comparison of vaccination rates within Lethbridge.

Lethbridge South has 82.1 per cent fully vaccinated 12 and up. Lethbridge North is at 81.7 per cent and Lethbridge West is at 82.4 per cent.

"So, still low in comparison and that's a difficult thing. If people made their mind up not to be vaccinated, that's their choice and some are choosing that, but obviously, we're lower than others in the south here. The best I recommend though is to follow the medical recommendations as per Chief Medical Officer Deena Hinshaw. She's really the catalyst with all this involved to make those good decisions on what's best for all of our health and welfare concerns. I don't know how you go against that personally, and we're relying on her expertise for obvious reasons. Along with her team who are highly trained and highly qualified and that's really as good as it gets. I don't know why we're so low and I don't have those answers."

Merrill Harris, rev. of the M.D. of Taber, also stated the previous council did their best to provide real information for their residents - and the new council will continue to do that. "Since I can't do a reverse medical professional, I do not believe it is appropriate for me to either encourage or discourage vaccination, and getting vaccinated is a personal choice that should be made in consultation with a doctor. As a local government, we have implemented a Temporary Mandatory Face Covering Bylaw No. 1989 which only came into effect when the total number of regional active cases, as determined by the Alberta government, is reported by Alberta Health Services to be 50 cases or more per 100,000 in population," he said.

"We have also done our best to communicate with the public and encourage citizens to do their best to help slow the spread. Working with Mayor Prokop and Mayor (Margaret) Plimtree of Vauxhall, we have produced a series of videos to help educate and encourage a safe way forward. This process also involves translating the information to those who have English as a second language. Additionally, we have worked with Family and Community Support Services (FCSS) on sharing the message of what each person can do to help slow the spread."

With several new councillors at the table after the recent election, Harris says council will continue to work with AHS to keep up to date on regulations and rules.

"As a member of council, our role is to help ensure transparency, so people have as much information as possible to make their own informed decisions. Now that harvest is over and life on the farms is slowing down, we hope people will find the time to get vaccinated," he added. "In the meantime, we will continue to work with Alberta Health Services to follow, support and educate our residents as soon as the new public health measures become available, and will continue to do so as we navigate through this together with the rest of the province."

The M.D. did have 19 to Zero - "a dedicated coalition of academics, public health experts, behavioural economists, and creative professionals working to understand, engage with, and ultimately shift public perceptions around COVID-19 behaviours and vaccination", visit council earlier this year.

That visit did lead to a discussion on how to decrease vaccine hesitancy in the area and a suggestion for the group to visit Comfest.

Being low in vaccination rates, Taber businesses also face the difficult decision on whether or not to adapt vaccine passports. If they do, then they can only serve 50 per cent of clientele in the Taber area. However, if they don't, then they are forced to deal with the restrictions imposed on them.

"I do not know how many businesses have a vaccine passport, but I know most government agencies are taking that as a requirement. We haven't gone down that path yet and I'm not sure if we will, but I think we're just looking to follow the Alberta Health Services recommendations, rules and restrictions as we have from the start. We have not wavered from that decision at all," said Prokop.

Prokop also stated whether or not enforcing businesses to take it on as a requirement, was mentioned at the mayoral forum.

"There's no consistency with the vaccine passport - either people have it or don't have it and have to refuse customers or have many restrictions placed on them. It was discussed at the forum and I don't believe we have a right to tell businesses what to do. It's a very deep ask to suggest that and I think that's a whole other level that's not fair and reasonable for us as a council to make that decision."

The decision will be a difficult one for Taber small businesses as there is no clear answer, says Prokop.

"The province is doing it governmentally but only that, and I think it's a business choice on whether or not to adapt the passport. Does anybody follow the government lead? I think that's their choice."
