

GYRO PARK - VICTORIA PARK

HISTORY

The Gyro Park was established in 1891 as the Queen Victoria Park. The Town of Lethbridge bought 40 acres from the Alberta Railway & Irrigation Company for the use by the Agricultural Society. The agricultural fair and exhibition grounds were located there from 1896-1910. The grounds were complete with a horse racing track with grandstand. Horse events, livestock showings, farm product displays, handicrafts, Chautauqua shows from 1897-1910. In 1904 the rodeo became part of the exhibition days. In 1912 the city was to host the Dryland Farming Congress however the grounds were too small for the agricultural show so the grounds were relocated to east of town.

BUILDINGS/STRUCTURES

For this central park on the south side of the city, there is a brick entrance at 10A Avenue leading into the park. The cover of the entranceway is made of wood and at the left side there is a flower box. The name "GRYO Park" is in black letters is seen under the overlapping roof. From there a cement walkway curses to the right and left. There is a plaque on the right side of the entrance which states that 'The area is dedicated to the citizens of Lethbridge from the Gyro Club, July 1st, 1960.

To the right of the entrance as one is facing south, there is a small playground and circular pathways wind through the green. In the vicinity of the maintenance shed and washrooms, there are to metal tables with checker boards for a friendly game of checkers in the summertime. Along the pathways straight and arched there are benches for one to relax. The various sized trees and shrubs enhance the area.
