

PRINCETON PARK

106 Princeton Crescent West

Princeton Park is a very secluded park with a great playground. Street access is limited with only three narrow pathways leading into the park making this a perfect spot for a quiet afternoon of play.

The playground features a climbing apparatus, swings and a slide, as well as seating for parents.

This park has a small amount of green space with large mature trees filled with song birds. The green space is ideal for young children to run and play, or for setting up a blanket for a picnic or to relax with a book.

Overall this is one of the quieter parks in the city as it does not front on any streets making it perfect for an afternoon escape with the family or a good book.
